Daily Planet

Tuesday, May 14   2002

Bradley appointed chief engineer at NASA by O'Keefe

Theron M. Bradley Jr. was appointed as NASA's chief engineer Monday by Administrator Sean O'Keefe. In this position, Bradley is responsible for overall review and technical readiness of all NASA programs and reports directly to O'Keefe. The 55-year-old former U.S. Navy nuclear engineer also has previously served as a civilian with the U.S. Department of Energy and with the Department of Defense. Bradley's appointment is effective June 15.

No taxi service from 7:30 a.m. - 2:30 p.m. Tuesday

Federal rep from Mail Handlers Health Benefit Plan visits Marshall 9-11 a.m. Wednesday, Bldg. 4200, Room 341

'Walk for Health' Wednesday

The annual "Walk for the Health of It" is Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. in front of the Wellness Center, Bldg. 4315. In case of rain, the event will be Thursday. The Marshall Center directorate with the most participants, and the directorate with the highest percentage of participation, each will receive a "Golden Shoe" trophy.

Security reminds employees not to cover official badges

Security officials are asking all Marshall team members to make sure that any extra badges worn by employees are behind their official NASA or contractor badge. This includes the "I Think Safe Because" badges.

Blood drive 8 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. Friday, in the Wellness Center, Bldg. 4315 on Digney Road